What is a Studio Portrait?

"Studio Portrait" generally refers to a type of professional photography where subjects are photographed in a controlled environment, typically a photography studio. This type of portrait photography is characterized by carefully controlled lighting, backdrops, and settings to achieve a specific and often polished or refined look.

Studio portraits are commonly used for various purposes, including individual or family portraits, headshots for professional profiles, and commercial photography for products or advertisements. The controlled environment of a studio allows photographers to create a specific aesthetic and mood tailored to the client's needs.

If "Studio Portrait" is mentioned in the context of a product, service, or photography package, it might refer to a specific offering by a photographer or studio. This could include a session where individuals or groups can have professional portraits taken in a studio setting.
