What is Catchlight Brushes?

Catchlights are the reflections of light sources in a subject's eyes, often used in photography to add depth and life to a portrait. In the context of graphic design and image editing, "Catchlight Brushes" likely refers to brushes designed to add catchlights to the eyes in digital images. These brushes can be used in software like Adobe Photoshop to enhance portraits by adding realistic or stylized catchlights to the eyes of the subjects.

Catchlight brushes can come in various shapes, sizes, and styles to match different lighting conditions and artistic preferences. Some brushes might simulate natural light sources like window light, studio lights, or even outdoor sunlight, while others might be more creative or abstract in nature.
