In contrast to the traditional anamorphic flares package, these were filmed to make them valuable and flexible.

Traditionally, editors follow anamorphic flares from lights (For example, car headlights, flashlights, etc.) to give the audience the illusion that the footage was shot with a high-end cinema lens.

That's why we wanted to change the scene and shoot these anamorphic flares in various angles, at different intensities, durations, and speeds so that you can select your favorites and customize each flare to create distinctive overlay tracks, transitions, and other effects.

Beware of cheesy overlays and transitions and fake anamorphic imitators.
