- All the world's a soundbank.
- And oftentimes, a few of the very original tones and timbres stem from the very mundane items in your surroundings. The daily paper, a classic perfume bottle, a sheet of metal that is useless in your own garage, the ribbing of vinyl, a rock dropping into an oily bicycle series -- only consider Aphex Twin's "Schottky 7th Path" and its own haunting rattle noise or the directional range on Amon Tobin's "Foley Room."
- In the event that you listen carefully, you will find unusual tone colors available anywhere. When compiling our "Foley Sounds" bundle, we went to great lengths to supply just functional and interesting sounds which may be injected to a track of just about any genre -- ambient, experimental materials, industrial, techno, or perhaps snare and trip-hop. Use your creativity and involve those crackling, hissing, and rumbling new thoughts for an unconventional creation that will emerge.
- To kickstart items using a palette of varied sounds, we listed bottles, breathing, chains, older pumps, plastic totes, sandpaper, sponges, miniature metals, large metals, cables, and a great assortment of different items and substances awaiting an ingenious modulation. Obviously, all documents are lossless 24-bit WAVs.
