What is Serif Display?

Serif Display refers to a typeface or font style characterized by the presence of serifs—small, decorative strokes extending from the ends of the main letter strokes. Specifically crafted for larger sizes, such as headings, titles, or prominent text in graphic design and print, Serif Display fonts are renowned for adding elegance and readability to printed materials. Serif fonts are broadly categorized as "serif" (with decorative strokes) and "sans-serif" (without). In the context of type design, "Display" denotes the font's intended use at larger sizes, allowing the intricate details and distinctive features to stand out. Display fonts are commonly employed in headlines, titles, logos, and other instances where a bold and visually striking appearance is desired.
