On Alien Worlds: Retro Sci-Fi Effects you can get exactly this, using Soundtrack Loops' own Jason Donnelly as the controller. This collection of non-looping sound effects contains 71 sound files featuring the classic black and white sci-fi realism: Wobbly analog oscillators, basic arpeggios, chattering circuits, and all the traditional LFO modulations that range from sound to pitch. The paleo-ambient sound is cool and distant, quiet and perplexing, calling the mind back to Eno's simple, but mysteriously deep music for film era musings, and also the finest of the dronesmiths of the past as well as electronic music soundscapes from the academic world and proto-industrial pioneers from early underground electronic music. Keep in your mind that they're sound effects made by musicians! The sounds in Alien Worlds are internalized and subdued, focusing on the minimalist, minimal and abstract. It's the exact opposite of the soaring contemporary sci-fi sounds that are found in various Soundtrack Loops titles, such as the Galaxy Gunslinger series (produced by Belibat's legendary Belibat). If it's Under the Skin's level of bizarre or Star Wars-style epic, Soundtrack Loops has you covered in the sci-fi sound effects department.
